CONSULTING SERVICE FOR THE PROJECT ON WOMEN EMPOWERMENT “MOTHER’S HOME” IN SHANGHAI

Background

The SDG Agenda

The 2030 Agenda, which was unanimously adopted by 193 member states last summer, commits all people and institutions to work together, from 2016 onwards, to promote sustained and inclusive economic growth, social development and environmental protection. More importantly, the agenda aspires to target and benefit all groups— including women, children, persons with disabilities, the youth and future generations. This new, universal development agenda uses an integrated approach to sustainable development and collective action to address contemporary and future challenges at all levels, with an overarching imperative of ‘leaving no one behind’ as its central feature. To that end, UNDP China is firmly committed to the development of a mature and effective philanthropic sector in China, which supports projects that mobilize resources towards equality and higher standard of living in the country.

Chinese Philanthropy and Gender Equality in China

In China today, there are many women who have high levels of knowledge and cultural skills, but, because of traditional gender roles and other structural obstacles to female employment in China, there is a gender gap in the workforce. By extension, female empowerment also experiences setbacks in other areas of society. These women who have left the workforce are eager to communicate with other people, to learn with new things, and to improve their spiritual and cultural life. At the same time that women in the workforce are being constricted by gender roles, a rapidly urbanizing population in China is also leading to the increase of women's rights protection needs, as many women's rights and interests have been violated through increased cases of domestic violence among other issues. It is in this area where philanthropy can step in to fill the gap in providing services to these disadvantaged women. Many are in need of social services such as psychological counseling and platforms where they can share knowledge and skills. In these instances, foundations and NGOs can act as points of connection between women and the resources they need to start a business or to achieve meaningful employment.

Objectives of the project

One such program that works with the women in China is "Mother’s Home", lead by UNDP China, in partner with China Women Development Foundation and community partner Shanghai Women’s Federation in Minhang district. This program enables migrant & unemployed women in the community to develop their skills through skills training and to provide other members of their community with a variety of services, while developing a sense of camaraderie amongst them. The main target of this program is to empower women to find employment through channels of retail staff training, elderly care, and other family service skills training. For women who have certain vocational skills this program also seeks to provide employment opportunities, and at the same time to conduct various types of traditional cultural courses. Given the rise of technology, new initiatives should center on giving women opportunities in the digital space. New trainings in Shanghai should focus on e-commerce training and entrepreneurship. Direct beneficiaries of a single training are around 1,200 on projections of “Mother’s Home” project.

Scope of Work

In accordance with the objectives of this project, the contracted partner will assume the responsibility of providing trainings for the women selected by the local community. The detailed scope of work will be summarized as following:

Partner with local community, to conduct trainings for selected women.

The contracted partner will conduct 50-80 trainings simultaneously within 3 months in the community center, under following themes: Empowerment of Migrant Women, Women in E-Commerce, etc. The key activities include:

1) Design training structure:

The contracted partner will submit a detailed proposal outlining recommended training structure based on the needs, qualifications and expected outputs of selected women.

2) Conduct training:

The contracted partner is expected to conduct approximately 50-80 trainings to selected women with its teaching capacity in the community center. The trainings are expected to provide online and offline in the form of concept and skills teaching for sales and e-commerce, coaching, monitoring & motivation, etc.

3) Evaluate the training:

The contracted partner is expected to evaluate the training and provide feedback documents throughout and at the end of the training.

Deliverables:

- 1) Proposal containing elements described above
- 2) Training to selected women
- 3) Feedback and evaluation documents
