II. Background Information

Background and Rationale:

The Ministry of Education and United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) have initiated a programme called "Support to Knowledge and Lifelong Learning Skills (SKILLS) Programme" mainly to improve policy coherence for Technical Vocational Educational and Training (TVET) in Nepal and to coordinate planning and strengthen monitoring and evaluation of TVET provisions. For improving the policy coherence a policy dialogue has been established and instituted on a regular basis with concerned stakeholders. The programme is working for TVET policy coherence involving public, private sectors and donors in the reforms of TVET Policy 2012 by identifying the contradictions, inconsistencies, duplication and impractical provisions.

SKILLS programme aims to mitigate the gaps and set the priorities to address the current needs of TVET programmes and services. It is also assisting the government to implement the TVET Policy 2012 through policy dialogue involving line ministries, stakeholders and private sector.

TVET provisions in Nepal are scattered and often uncoordinated. Lack of baseline data and effective Monitoring and Evaluation (M & E) of TVET programmes and services are eminent issues. In most cases, stakeholders are unaware of who is doing what, and success stories are rarely shared among policy makers, training providers and beneficiaries.

The programme is conducting different studies and assessments to figure out the potholes in the existing policies in TVET sector. One of the major activities of the programme is to prepare effective documentation of these studies and assessments as there lacks proper database and documentation. At the same time, it is also working for developing TVET publications of national and international significance and preparing position papers on TVET in Nepal. Sharing of such documents, reports and data among policy-makers and key stakeholders is essential for soliciting their feedbacks and suggestions for making a better TVET sector. Effective mobilization of all types of media including Radio, TV, newspapers and new media, thus, is important in establishing two way communication between the policy makers and the stakeholders at all levels as a tool for facilitating dialogues.

As a regular communication activity, two sets of radio programmes will be produced to disseminate materials aimed at generating public awareness of main issues of TVET sectors and improving policy coherence by involving public, private sector, organizations/donors in the reforms of TVET Policy 2012. One set will be aired through a state-run public radio/national radio station and another set through a private or community FM radio having nation-wide network as a strategy to reaching out to both urban and rural audiences at the same time. The radio programmes will help create a favourable environment for bringing stakeholders in one platform to present a common vision of the TVET system in regards to human resources planning, and promotion of good practices for timely revision of the TVET Policy. It will help establish ownership among primary stakeholders of the TVET including line ministries, public and private sectors and donor agencies.
