BACKGROUND

The 2011 uprising and the following transitional phase provided both opportunities and challenges for Libyan women and men to rebuild their country. Specifically, the revolution presented an opportunity for women to assert their presence in the newly created political space. Yet, women represented less than six percent in Libya's first post-revolution government and only three per cent of the candidates in the first election post-revolution.

The transitional phase provided women with opportunities, but also confronted them with challenges to ensure their participation in the political process and democratic reforms. Libyan women succeeded in occupying 16.5 % of the seats of the General National Congress (33 women out of 200), due to the proportional representation in the election law. In the election of the House of Representatives, 15% of the total seats (200) were reserved for women. The election law of the Constitution Drafting Assembly (CDA) reserved six seats out of 60 to women. Unfortunately, many women still feel that they are not welcomed in local governance structures that are dominated by men.

Despite the quota that stipulates at least, one of the municipal council members should be a woman, these women feel that they are being discouraged from participating and are not able to fully take part in the decision-making processes. Lessons from other transitional countries show that while women can be a catalyst for change, changing the nature of women's participation is a gradual process. However, today, UN Action Plan that aims to end the division of Libya institutions and to establish a government to lead the process of the referendum on the constitution and then the elections more than ever has inspired Libyan women.

The UN Action Plan has set series of actions for smooth move to end the transitional phase that Libya has been going through since the revolution. UNSMIL and UNDP has embarked on series of actions and technical support to Libyan women interlocutors to be well prepared for the new political era once the elections are conducted. In that respect, both UN entities facilitated forums for women's political participation and legislations in which women articulated gender sensitive legislations and laws to be immediately presented to the new parliament and government. Women are support as well to participate in the nationwide consultation that will reflect people's voices and aspirations as well as women views on political issues. Libyan women started to engage with regional and UN entities that support the cause of gender equality.

UNSMIL and UNDP under Amel Project that promotes women's participation during the transition facilitated two trips for Libyan women delegation in 2016 and 2018 to the CSW where they held side events during the visits and highlighted globally the situation of Libyan women. Preparing Libyan women for the new political era post the election has been forecasted and supported by the government to ensure that the middle cadre of government officials and CSOs are well aware of UN global structures mandated to promote gender equality and equity and support government to promote gender concerns in their respective countries.

Accordingly, UNSMIL and UNDP agreed to recruit expert trainer on the UN Commission on the Status of Women to train 20 Libyan women and men on the functions of the commission, the content of the reports and mechanism of preparing the report.

The Individual contractor acknowledges and agrees that any breach of any of the provisions hereof shall constitute a breach of an essential term of the Contract, and, in addition to any other legal rights or remedies available to any person, shall give rise to grounds for termination of the Contract. In addition, nothing herein shall limit the right of UNDP to refer any alleged breach of the foregoing standards of conduct to the relevant national authorities for appropriate legal action.

The Recipient shall not be precluded from disclosing Information that is obtained by the Recipient from a third party without restriction, is disclosed by the Discloser to a third party without any obligation of confidentiality, is previously known by the Recipient, or at any time is developed by the Recipient completely independently of any disclosures hereunder. In the event of any termination of the Contract, UNDP shall only be liable to pay the Individual contractor compensation on a pro rata basis for no more than the actual amount of work performed to the satisfaction of UNDP in accordance with the requirements of the Contract. 16. AUDITS AND INVESTIGATIONS:

Each invoice paid by UNDP shall be subject to a post-payment audit by auditors, whether internal or external, of UNDP or by other authorized and qualified agents of UNDP at any time during the term of the Contract and for a period of two (2) years following the expiration or prior termination of the Contract. UNDP shall be entitled to a refund from the Individual contractor for any amounts shown by such audits to have been paid by UNDP other than in accordance with the terms and conditions of the Contract.

The Individual contractor acknowledges and agrees that, from time to time, UNDP may conduct investigations relating to any aspect of the Contract or the award thereof, the obligations performed under the Contract, and the operations of the Individual contractor generally relating to performance of the Contract. The right of UNDP to conduct an investigation and the Individual contractor's obligation to comply with such an investigation shall not lapse upon expiration or prior termination of the Contract.
