1. BACKGROUND

While the 2018 Elections, which ushered in a new Government headed by H.E. Brig (Ret.) Julius Maada Bio was generally conducted in a peaceful manner, there was some scale of political violence. Moreover, the media and public engagement were politicized and social media became a platform for disseminating misinformation and rumours. In the immediate aftermath of the elections, further incidents of violence were reported in some regions of the country. These acts of violence, notably in the forms of polarization and acrimony, were reason for concerns because of their potential threat to national cohesion and peaceful coexistence across communities in the country.

Consequently, the Government has identified the strengthening of national cohesion as one of its top priority areas. In his address on 11 May 2018, at the State Opening of the First Session of the Fifth Parliament of the Second Republic, the President announced the creation of an Independent Commission for Peace and National Cohesion to be established by an Act of Parliament. The development of the Act will be through extensive consultations across the country, culminating in a national conference on peacebuilding, diversity management and rebuilding of national cohesion. The aim is to promote cross-community and cross-regional unity, peace, and consensus building for sustainable development.

The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), over the years and most recently throughout the electoral cycle, has built a trusting relationship with the Government and the people of Sierra Leone. This track record has earned the new Government's trust enough to request UNDP to support the Government in the design and standing up of the Independent Commission for Peace and National Cohesion.

UNDP is therefore seeking to hire an International Consultant on Peace and National Cohesion to conduct a feasibility study and draft a Green Paper that will among others: a) outline a range of options on how to frame the mandate, define the scope, and organize the structure of the commission; b) assess the significant number of already existing related commissions and how the new commission will be coherent with these commissions; and c) articulate a roadmap for translating the Green Paper into an Act through Parliament (Green Paper to National Conference to White Paper to an Act). Developing the roadmap would require consultation with the Attorney General of Sierra Leone.
