1. BACKGROUND

Disaster context in Viet Nam

Viet Nam is one of the most disaster-prone countries globally, with frequent natural disasters costing multiple lives and causing damages and economic losses of up to the 1% of national GDP every year. In 2015/2016, the strongest El Nino-induced drought and salt water intrusion crisis in over 60 years affected more than 2 million people and damaged more than 660,000 ha of crops in the Central Highlands, South-Central and Mekong River Delta regions. In the following year 2017, Viet Nam experienced one of its strongest storm and rainy seasons to date. Typhoon Damrey, one of the strongest storms to make landfall in Viet Nam in the past decade, affected more than 4 million people.

The UN Disaster Management Team

The UN Disaster Management Team (UN DRMT) often undertakes needs assessments in the immediate aftermath of medium to large-scale disasters in Viet Nam. These assessments can provide complementary information on emergency relief needs of affected communities and vulnerable groups. The reports of such assessments are shared with partnering Government departments, UN agencies, NGOs and affected provinces for their information and action as required.

The challenge for Viet Nam

Although the Government of Viet Nam is proactive in the collection of data to support emergency relief activities through an internal system, recent disaster responses have shown that additional supplementary data on both emergency relief and recovery needs is often appreciated and required to better plan for an effective and timely response. In addition, the collection of associated socioeconomic baseline data will help to develop more in-depth and accurate risk and needs assessments that will support disaster preparedness and recovery activities.

Recent experience in Viet Nam has shown that the quality and effective use of disaster data are limited due to dispersed data sources, lack of availability of more human-based indicators, and inconsistencies in methods of estimation of affected population by vulnerable groups/costings of damage, amongst others.

An Innovative Project on 'Data Layering for Disaster Preparedness'

The Data Layering for Disaster Preparedness is a joint project of the UN DRMT in Viet Nam, coordinated by the United Nations Resident's Country Office and led by UNDP. Building on recent disaster data and preparedness planning exercises, the UN DRMT has identified and consolidated a baseline database for 07 sectors (health, food, shelter, water sanitation, education, protection, and early recovery).

Working with the baseline database, the Data Layering for Disaster Preparedness has developed predictive assessment tools to provide actionable data on impacts and damages following a natural disaster. Improving the visualization of available data, and identifying additional tools that can communicate disaster impacts, relief trends and related actions. For visualization of the tools, results produced by the tools should be visualized and mapped in the sense of attention-catching and clearly logical and systematic arrangements. The visualization tools should focus on presenting data to show damage, humanitarian relief/assistance, and recovery needs in figures and numbers.

2. SCOPE OF WORK

UNDP is seeking technical expertise from a consultancy firm to (1) further improve the utility of current predictive assessment tools to enable them to effectively utilize additional variables such as wind speed, typhoon strength or other data relevant to disaster tools and (2) to track damage and assistance received; (3) identify additional data based tools that could contribute to better analysis and action after disasters. The consulting institute will need to innovate and suggest specific areas to work out the gaps and suggest measures to fill in.

Following consultation with UN partner organizations, initial suggestions for review and feasibility review by the technical experts should focus on tools:

- To track delivery of humanitarian relief and recovery assistance in tangible and economic terms (in visual and potentially map based tools).
- To tools to visualize damage or disaster impacts in visual and map-based tools. Priority should be given to looking at ways of visualizing the extent of wind damage and the extent of flood damage, ideally as time series data based on data reasonably accessible to the UN in a disaster setting.

Resources are being provided through an innovation fund, so creative and 'out-of-the-box' solutions and ideas are welcome in consideration and execution of this task.

Key tasks: The contractor will be required to think creatively, but also to review data availability and feasibility of the data needs suggested by the UN team. As such, the first key task will be review the predictive assessment tools which have been developed and tested, including baseline data sets for all provinces in key provinces. Following this initial stage, the team should review data availability and then develop pilot tools that are able to deliver at least 2 of the ideas below:

- A visual and mapping tool for estimate costs for humanitarian relief/ early recovery support provided.
- A visual and mapping tool for estimating economic damage from specific disasters (particularly typhoons and potentially floods) and/or potential long term recovery cost estimates
- A visual and/or mapping tool for showing extent of flooding
- A visual and/or mapping tool to show path of damage for key sectors such as housing and/or crops related to wind speeds and typhoon tracks

Map the results produced by the tools above in systematic and logical arrangements. It is expected that tools could utilize existing GIS-based mapping resources.

To ensure effective management of the process, the assigned team from the contractor will be required to:

- Consult regularly with UN agencies to better understand needs and to improve the above visualization of the tools. Test the final tools in at least one actual or 'model' disaster setting to ensure their smooth functional performance
- Develop a short, accessible 'how-to' manual and organize a one-day training workshop in Ha Noi for 25 participants (from the UN agencies, core members of the Disaster Management Working Group, Viet Nam Disaster Management Authority) on the tools application in the context of typhoon occurrence at the contractor's costs.
- Develop a concise action oriented final reports that includes clear recommended action for ensuring the sustainability and if necessary further development of systems developed.

3. DELIVERABLES

The contractor will need to deliver the following outputs:

No	Deliverables	Specifications	Due date
1	Inception report	Detailing the approaches of specific tasks assigned to members, workplan and timeframe, etc. following consultation with key UN agencies and other experts	20/11/2018
2	The predictive assessment tools	Initial prototype of at least one tool to be developed	30/12/2018
3	Data visualization tools	- Tested and visualized predictive tools on relief/recovery tracking as defined in inception report - Testing and visualized tool on damage estimation as defined in the inception report	28/2/2019
4	Data visualization tools	Finalized the tools with guiding manual, training workshop, and final report	30/4/2019

4. LOCATION AND SUPERVISION

Location: the consulting institute does not need to work in the UNDP office. However, assigned team will need to hold meetings or discussions with UNDP staff on a bi-weekly basis, and with other UN agencies on the ad-hoc basis.

Technical oversight: the contract shall be oversight by UNDP's Senior Technical Advisor.

5. DOCUMENTS AND SUPPORT OF UNDP

UNDP and the UN DRMT in Viet Nam will provide limited administrative support to the consulting institute in the implementation of this contract. However, the contractor has the primary responsibility to actively facilitate discussions, consultations, appointments, meetings etc. to fulfil its obligations in this contract.

6. SELECTION CRITERIA

1. Institute's assigned technical staff holds an Advanced Degree specialized in Information Technology Science or related field - 200 points
2. Institute's technical staff holds an Advanced Degree specialized in Geographic Information System or related field - 200 points
3. Institute has at least 5-year experience working with data visualization and mapping tools, ideally in development or humanitarian contexts- 200 points.
4. Prefer an institute with practical experience working in modeling disaster impacts based on factors such as wind speed, precipitation or vulnerable groups – 100 points
5. Prefer an institute with practical experience working in damage and need assessment and having costed impacts post-disasters– 100 points
6. Institute shows evidence for similar assignments on data visualization and mapping tools – 150 points
7. Proven good English skill – 50 points

7. PAYMENT TERMS AND CONTRACT DURATION

Fee will be made after the contract deliverables are accepted by UNDP.

- 50% of the fee will be transferred as the inception report submitted and accepted by UNDP (detailing the approaches of specific tasks assigned to members, workplan and timeframe, etc.).

- 50% of the fee will be paid and liquidated upon satisfaction of all remaining deliverables.

The consulting institute shall quote an all-inclusive cost for the contract. The term “all-inclusive” implies that all costs (PIT tax, professional fees, communications, consumables, etc.) that could be incurred by the consulting institute.

UNDP will cover travel cost and daily allowances when the assigned consultants travel to the field for tool testing if so required based on UN-EU cost norms
