6.1 Details on Thematic Issue-1: Civil and Political Rights

The Constitution of Bangladesh responses a number of civil and political rights as part fundamental rights<sup>6</sup> in line with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) and International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR). Article 31 of the Constitution guarantees the right to life and <sup>5</sup> CSO coalitions: CSOs coalition is a coalition or platform of rights-based CSOs, who have presence in priority areas and full of commitment to work together on thematic rights issues. The maximum numbers of CSOs in a coalition will be highly encouraged.

personal liberty whereas ‘no person shall be deprived of life or personal liberty save in accordance with law refers in the Article 32. The constitution also recognizes all citizens as equal before the law and entitled to equal protection of law<sup>7</sup>.’ Despite that the civil and political rights of people in Bangladesh are now in a serious challenge due to increasing allegations of extra judicial killing, torture and abduction (against law enforcing agencies), in security of the writers/bloggers/journalists/Human Rights activists and the lengthy procedures of investigations and delivery of justice. In such a situation, rights to life and enjoyment of people’s rights to live with dignity emerged as a serious concern. There are rare initiatives taken by the state authorities to take responsive actions against these allegations. It creates mis-trust, negative perception and helpless position of people to secure their rights and protection under the law. Regarding this, sensible state authorities and responsible civil society (including media and CSOs) can play the key role to raise the concerns of civil and political rights of the people in Bangladesh.

Considering that the call focuses on civil and political rights to take initiatives for sensitizing the state authorities and making the civil society (including media, CSOs) more responsive to advance people’s rights to life and dignity. The actions should consider the local and national context of Bangladesh with special focus on:

- Strengthening capacity of the state authorities/state institutions on civil and political rights to make them more sensible in protection of people’s rights and dignity;
- Media, monitoring and fact-finding on civil and political rights issues/concerns at local and national level;

It contains total 167 million population<sup>8</sup>, whereas only 9.5% population belong to minority groups and it is in declining trend<sup>9</sup>. A large section of minority population belongs to religious minority groups (i.e. Hindu, Buddha and Christian) and a small section (approximate 2%) to ethnic minority groups in Bangladesh. It is noted here that a section of religious minorities (around 6.5 million) are defined as Dalits, who belongs to diverse communities and facing wider discriminations to lead dignified lives in Bangladesh. There is also 300,000 non-Bengali Urdu or mix-language speaking people, who are currently living in different camps in urban settings of Bangladesh.

Considering that the call focuses on integrated actions of the CSO coalition in context of HRP priority districts in Bangladesh. The actions should consider the rights and protection of Minorities (including ethnic/religious/Dalits/gender diverse communities with specific focus on.

It is reported that 33 million children<sup>11</sup> in Bangladesh live in poverty while about one in four children is deprived of at least four basic needs. It is fact that Bangladesh has already introduced several laws and constitutional provisions in line with UNCRC and ILO conventions to uphold child rights but rarely transformed into the visible results.
