1. BACKGROUND

We live in a world of rapid political, economic, social, technological, cultural and environmental changes that are profoundly affecting our communities, cities, nations and the global community. Most of these changes are driven by complex challenges, such as climate change, inequality, migration and happen against background of technological disruption, strained social contract, rethinking of public value and roles of the public and private sectors.

Nowhere, are these challenges more conspicuous than in Asia and the Pacific. The region's outsize economic growth, rising technological innovation, urbanization and demand for education coupled with high inequality, vulnerability to disasters and dramatic environmental risks make it a real test case for our governance institutions. To galvanize and facilitate exploration of the new governance models UNDP has initiated NextGenGov discussion in Istanbul in 2018. The NextGenGov initiative aims to explore the kind of policy/ bureaucratic innovations needed to bridge the growing 'relevance gap' in governance processes and approaches in order to make governance (at local, national and global levels) fit for the 21st Century.

Building on that UNDP in Asia and the Pacific intends to develop NextGenGov initiative to reflect growing importance of the region both in terms progress and challenges as well as strength of innovation journey often happening relatively under the radar. NextGenGov shall serve as an opportunity/ platform to further capture the growing gap between the emerging reality (challenges, opportunities and strategic risks) and existing practice, explore and learn from the models emerging across the region and to jointly iterate approaches to help transformation of current governance structures to be better fit for the 21st century. The first chapter of NextGenGov events shall begin in Harare (Zimbabwe) in November 2019 covering the African region and next in Bangkok in March 2020 covering the Asia Pacific region. The events shall be followed by some experiments in governance innovation across the two regions with the help of a cohort of senior bureaucrats who hold strategic risks within departments/ ministries at national/sub-national/state level.
