SECTION 5. TERMS OF REFERENCE

Revised Terms of Reference (TOR)

Hiring Organization for strengthening capacities for resilience and conflict-sensitive practice in Cox's Bazar District

1. Project Title: Sustaining Peace in Cox's Bazar: strengthening capacities for resilience and conflict-sensitive practice.

2. Background/Project Description:

Since 2017, approximately 750,000 Rohingya have fled violence at the hands of the Myanmar military, which has led a decades-long systematic effort to repress the Muslim minority group. As a result, Bangladesh is now host to one of the largest refugee populations in the world: more than 910,000² reside in densely-populated camps and settlements across Cox's Bazar district, while a significant number of people of various ethnic groups, including Rohingya, are forcibly displaced within Rakhine and reportedly in Paletwa Chin State as a result of ongoing conflict between the Arakan Army and the Myanmar military.

The situation is constantly evolving. Cox's Bazar is grappling with interlocking challenges relating to the crisis, including how to address the humanitarian needs of the Rohingya while ensuring basic service delivery for the local population, and how to mitigate the multiple social, economic, environmental, political, and security implications of the crisis. Meanwhile, recent escalations in violence in Northern Rakhine suggest that security in the northwest of Myanmar will continue to deteriorate. As the situation in Cox's Bazar becomes more protracted, tensions between and among the host community and the Rohingya refugee population are growing. If left unaddressed, these tensions not only threaten to undermine the system-wide humanitarian response but have the potential to seriously damage the social fabric of the district, which would have far-reaching implications for the local population and humanitarian and development actors alike.

In light of this, there is an urgent need for more analysis-informed, conflict-sensitive programming that places prevention and mediation at the centre of the UN's work in Cox's Bazar district. Prevention-driven policy and practice that promotes social and economic development district-wide, addresses the root causes of fragility and tension among and between communities, and reduces humanitarian needs and vulnerabilities is vital. However, such responses must be complemented by the development of a more coherent and coordinated approach among humanitarian, peace, and development actors that incentivizes and supports increased investments in prevention.

With an overarching view to alleviate tensions and sustain peace in the region, this project aims to strengthen the UN's ability to effectively respond to peace, development, and humanitarian needs in Cox's Bazar by: i) improving understanding of the sub-regional context; ii) building institutional capacities to integrate conflict-sensitive, peace-oriented considerations into policy and practice; and iii) strengthening existing mediation, mitigation, and conflict prevention efforts. To achieve this, the project comprises two key activities: 1) a conflict and development analysis of the situation in Cox's Bazar, which includes a mapping of existing and potential community-based mitigation, mediation, and conflict prevention mechanisms; and 2) conflict-sensitivity and conflict prevention training for key stakeholders working in Cox's Bazar.

UNDP is in a process of hiring a suitable institution/research organization to implement to achieve the intended output in 25 unions of eight Upazillas under Cox's Bazar district.

3. Working Area:

The selected organization will implement assigned activities in 25 Unions of 8 Upazillas under Cox's Bazar as described in below table:

Name of Upazila	Number of Unions
Cox's Bazar Sadar	3
Ramu	2
Chakoria	2
Maheshkhali	2
Kutubdia	2
Pekua	2
Teknaf	6
Ukhia	6
Total	25

4. Outcomes, Outputs, Activities, and Timeline

Specific Objective: Overall objective of the hiring Organization is to “(1) Produce a comprehensive conflict and development analysis, including a current response assessment, in Cox's Bazar district and (2) develop the capacities of relevant stakeholders through targeted conflict-sensitivity training”.

The selected organization needs to achieve the following outputs:

Output 1 – Improved institutional knowledge of the needs and challenges of, and opportunities for, peace-development and humanitarian programme in CXB.

Output 2: Improved institutional capacity to integrate conflict sensitivity and prevention considerations into UN programme and policy.

i. OUTCOMES

With an overarching view to ensure that the UN can effectively respond to the myriad needs of Cox's Bazar district, this project seeks to strengthen institutional capacities to sustain peace, alleviate tensions, and enhance community resilience. Accordingly, the project will focus on achieving the four following outcomes:

Outcome 1: Increased access to and greater generation of analysis, evidence, and knowledge to inform effective policy and programme development

Outcome 2: Increased capacity of stakeholders to prevent, mediate, and mitigate tensions and sustain peace

Outcome 3: Improved institutional capacities to plan and deliver conflict-sensitive humanitarian, peace, and development programming at the local/district level

Outcome 4: Enhanced knowledge and understanding of the centrality of prevention to effective coordination and coherence across humanitarian, development, and peacebuilding

ii. KEY OUTPUTS AND PROPOSED ACTIVITIES

The following outputs are derived from the above-stated outcomes and incorporate two key activity areas. Activity 1 will guide and form the basis for Activity 2 (2.1, 2.2). Activity 1 must precede Activity 2.

Expected Output 1 – IMPROVED INSTITUTIONAL KNOWLEDGE OF THE NEEDS AND CHALLENGES OF, AND OPPORTUNITIES FOR, PEACE-DEVELOPMENT-AND HUMANITARIAN PROGRAMMING IN CXB

Activity 1: Conduct conflict and development analysis of the situation in Cox’s Bazar

Context: Historically a popular tourist destination in Bangladesh due to its long coastline, the rapid influx of Rohingya refugees in late 2017 has left the district’s main town, Cox’s Bazar Sadar, awash with aid and development staff who serve as the main providers of humanitarian and development assistance to affected communities. Meanwhile, the Rohingya population now outnumber the local population 2 to 1 in Ukiyha and Teknaf upazilas, which are host to the largest refugee settlements. As the situation becomes more protracted, the strain of the Rohingya crisis is increasingly being felt across a district that faced serious economic and development challenges well before the 2017 crisis began. Indeed, with the majority of funding targeted toward addressing the needs of the Rohingya population and that of the immediate surrounding host communities, there is concern that an already lagging district may fall further behind. At the same time, as resources dwindle and the frustrations of both the host community and the Rohingya population grow, the crisis is presenting various interconnected social, cultural, economic, environmental, political, and security challenges, including but not limited to: rising social tensions; a surge in illicit economies; organized crime; gender-based violence; increasing environmental damage; and growing negative perceptions of the Rohingya population among the broader Bangladeshi community. In order to better understand and respond to the complex needs of the district and the Rohingya response at large, UNDP proposes to lead in undertaking a deep-dive conflict and development analysis of Cox’s Bazar district. The conflict and development analysis will comprise two parts:

1. Conflict Analysis: This portion of the analysis will examine the social, cultural, economic, environmental, political, and security elements that contribute to the current context, while offering insights into broader trends, needs, challenges, and opportunities to sustaining peace in Cox’s Bazar district. This will incorporate a gender analysis of conflict dynamics.
2. Current Response Assessment: This portion of the analysis will map existing mediation, mitigation, and prevention mechanisms, including relevant UN policies and programming, and identify entry points for strengthening prevention-focused practice and policy across the humanitarian, peace, and development pillars.

Purpose: Strategic planning, conflict-sensitive programming, conflict prevention and early warning

Level: District/Local

Potential Users: UN agencies including ISCG members, implementing partners, and national authorities

Duration: 3.5 months (for detailed timeline please following section)

Location of Study: Research will be conducted district-wide with a focus on dynamics at the Union Parishad level. The study will therefore be centred on the following areas: Kutubdia Upazila, Cox’s Bazar Upazila, Chakoria Upazila, Pekua Upazila, Moheshkhali Upazila, Ramu Upazila, Ukiyha Upazila, and Teknaf Upazila.

Analytical Framework: It is proposed that the following analytical framework be used to guide planning and execution of the conflict and development analysis:

1. Conflict Analysis

- Situation or context analysis – an overview of the current situation in CXB, including an assessment of relevant historical, political, economic, social, security, cultural, demographic, and environmental factors and dynamics that make up the current context;
- Causal analysis – identification of the root and/or structural causes of the issues in question (eg. human or drug trafficking), including their intermediate/proximate causes and triggers;
- Stakeholder analysis/actor mapping – an analysis of those engaged in or affected by the Rohingya response, including their interests, goals, positions, capacities, and relationships;
- Gender analysis – an analysis of the gendered dimensions of the context and various issues to help identify, understand, and describe gender differences, needs, risks and the relevance of gender roles and power dynamics in CXB;
- Conflict/issue dynamics analysis – an examination of the resulting interaction between the context, the root causes of issues at play, and key stakeholders. This may or may not include forecasting, ie. proposing potential short-, medium-, or long-term scenarios and providing appropriate recommendations for response.

2. Current Response Assessment

- Mapping – a mapping of existing prevention, mediation, and mitigation interventions, responses, and/or activities across the district;
- Criticality and/or gap assessment – an assessment of the gaps in UN responses in order to identify potential entry points for the UN and partners to address the root causes of issues in CXB, strengthen existing mechanisms and programmes, and work more effectively to mediate and prevent an escalation in tensions. This will include an examination of local capacities, coping mechanisms, and overall opportunities to provide conflict-sensitive responses that are driven by gender and human rights considerations.

Methodology: The conflict and development analysis will require a mixed-method approach incorporating primary and secondary data collection (qualitative only). This will include but is not limited to key informant interviews, focus group discussions, and document review:

Primary research collection

- Meta-analysis of existing knowledge products, including but not limited to those produced by the UNDP CXB Analysis and Research Unit (CARU)—namely the quarterly public perception surveys and monthly reports—as well as those produced by the future World Food Programme (WFP) research and analysis unit and other relevant agencies and/or programmes.
- Mapping of existing community-based mediation, mitigation, and prevention mechanisms district-wide.

Secondary research collection

- Data collection involving field consultations (interviews, focus group discussions) with key stakeholders, including but not limited to members of refugee communities and host populations; local religious leaders; community leaders; and representatives of local government, civil society, and relevant community groups. A balanced gender ratio among enumerators and respondents will be ensured.

Target Population and Sampling

The target population includes inhabitants of the eight upazilas of Cox's Bazar district (within which there are 71 unions) and members of the Rohingya population. Given the large study population, priority will be given to unions within the upazilas most affected by the Rohingya crisis: Ukhiya and Teknaf. Control areas and Rohingya camps will be selected based on population size and demographic composition. The following is the suggested number of unions that should be selected for each Upazila:

- Kutubdia Upazila – 2 unions selected
- Cox's Bazar Upazila – 3 unions selected
- Chakoria Upazila – 2 unions selected
- Pekua Upazila – 2 unions selected
- Moheskhal Upazila – 2 unions selected
- Ramu Upazila – 2 unions selected
- Ukhiya Upazila – 6 unions selected
- Teknaf Upazila – 6 unions selected, including Teknaf municipality

Required resources: A core team of researchers embedded in Cox's Bazar for the duration of the research project will be required. The research team (4 – 6 people) should comprise a mixture of local and international staff and ensure a balanced gender ratio. The designated research team leader will work closely with the UNDP Sub-Office and the UNRCO Peace and Development Advisory Team throughout all stages of research design and delivery. Resources for focus group discussions, interviews, and surveying will also be needed.

Expected Output 2: IMPROVED INSTITUTIONAL CAPACITY TO INTEGRATE CONFLICT SENSITIVITY AND PREVENTION CONSIDERATIONS INTO UN PROGRAMMING AND POLICY

Activity 2.1: Design a training programme on conflict prevention and conflict-sensitive programming

Context:

Traditional approaches to crisis response are often externally-driven, reactionary, and thus limited in their scope and ability to effectively adapt to an evolving context. On the contrary, prevention-driven approaches prioritize local leadership, a sound understanding of the root causes of tension and the unfolding situational dynamics, and analysis-informed, evidence-based programming. This is cornerstone for maximizing the positive impacts of programmes, minimizing the potential for harm, and most importantly, for creating conditions conducive to sustaining peace.

As the situation in Cox's Bazar evolves, there is an increasing need to strengthen institutional capacities to integrate conflict prevention and conflict-sensitivity considerations into programming and policy development. As such, a training programme on conflict prevention and conflict-sensitivity will be developed for staff working in both Cox's Bazar and Dhaka, including those involved in programme design, implementation, and monitoring and evaluation. This will incorporate gender and inclusion elements and be partly guided by the findings of Activity 1. It will be designed around the following modules:

- Module 1 – The need for conflict sensitivity in Cox's Bazar: context update
- Module 2 – Introducing conflict prevention and conflict sensitivity: definitions and key principles

- Module 3 – Conflict sensitivity, human rights, and gender equality: mutually reinforcing approaches
- Module 4 – Steps in conflict-sensitive programming
- Module 5 – Applying conflict sensitivity at the organisational, programmatic, and donor levels
- Module 6 – Applying conflict-sensitive approaches in the project cycle (design, implementation, monitoring & evaluation)
