

UNDP's Response to Proposers' Question
RFP/UNDP/003/2014/DOCO for the Development & Implementation of the Country
Coordination Reporting System – Round 6

1	Q	This project was open to firms not based in New York. If so, how many visits would be required to support the project in person in New York in additional to regularly virtual meetings?
	A	The number of visits really depends on the plan of action that the bidders propose. We would assume that there would need to be more face to face interactions in New York during the early 'discovery' phase and then additional visits at key milestones during the development and testing process. In short, we have no fixed requirements of bidders being here but bidders will have to propose working arrangements that include travelling here, videoconferencing and regular telephone conversations that will convince us of an effective partnership.
