Omissions	34.2 UNDP may request the Bidder to submit the necessary information or documentation, within a reasonable period of time, to rectify nonmaterial nonconformities or omissions in the Proposal related to documentation requirements. Such omission shall not be related to any aspect of the price of the Proposal. Failure of the Bidder to comply with the request may result in the rejection of its Proposal.
	34.3 For Financial Proposal that has been opened, UNDP shall check and correct arithmetical errors as follows:
	a) if there is a discrepancy between the unit price and the line item total that is obtained by multiplying the unit price by the quantity, the unit price shall prevail and the line item total shall be corrected, unless in the opinion of UNDP there is an obvious misplacement of the decimal point in the unit price; in which case the line item total as quoted shall govern and the unit price shall be corrected;
	if there is an error in a total corresponding to the addition or subtraction of subtotals, the subtotals shall prevail and the total shall be corrected; and

	c) if there is a discrepancy between words and figures, the amount in word shall prevail, unless the amount expressed in words is related to a arithmetic error, in which case the amount in figures shall prevail.
	34.4 If the Bidder does not accept the correction of errors made by UNDP, its Proposal shall be rejected.
E. AWARD OF CON	TRACT

MINIMUM CONTENTS

a. Background Information and Rationale, Project Description

For central banks to drive the development of the financial sector through their data, the need for innovative, rationalized reporting architectures is clear. It goes beyond improving data quality and relieving administrative pain points to ensuring the continued smooth functioning of the financial sector through proactive supervisory activities that are evidence-informed and risk-based. More timely, granular, and diverse data and improved collection, validation, analysis, and reporting process and tools help to:

- Accelerate regulatory policy development related to emerging issues and changing risk environments.
- Reduce the time between risk identification and supervisory response, allowing "proactive" versus "reactive" supervision and faster regulatory risk mitigation efforts.
- Conduct thematic or cross-sectional reviews of emerging or higher risk areas to influence financial service providers (FSPs) risk-taking and obtain actionable intelligence for related policy development.
- Uncover potential sources and concentrations of risk in the financial sector.
- Understand geographical distribution of access points or emerging risks related to financial service products and services.
- Reduce the opportunity for regulatory arbitrage.
- Lower compliance costs.

UNCDF/UNDP aims to support central banks in Ethiopia, Gabon, Malawi, and the Pacific Islands to design, build and launch solutions to automate the collection, validation, and analysis of digital financial services (DFS) data to keep up pace with the technological advancements happening in the financial services industry. UNCDF/UNDP would like to conduct Diagnostic Assessments to understand the public intent data enablers, financing, technical capacity, governance, and data demand, in the specified countries. To ensure proposed options meets the needs of the respective central bank, UNCDF/UNDP would like to conduct in-depth stakeholder engagements to understand the existing objectives for using data and technical capacity (available data architecture and skills) to devise a clear data automation pathway.

b. Specific Objectives

The diagnostic assessment aims to:

- assess whether data governance needs are in place, i.e., are laws and regulations conducive to production of quality data?
- assess existing data collection, storage, validation, analysis, and reporting processes and determine areas requiring improvement and possible technologies that could be leveraged.
- assess central banks' readiness and demand for "suptech" (supervisory technology) or "regtech" (regulatory technology) solutions based on the existing infrastructure, human skills, budget allocations and political will.
- produce a report that will give central banks leadership teams a summary of the existing data architecture, identified bottlenecks, and a roadmap for potential solutions tailored to their needs, wishes, and constraints.
- inform the design and deployment of data automation solutions to improve the volume, variety, speed, and accuracy of data available to financial authorities' analysts, supervisors, and regulators.

The solutions should allow different personas (user groups) to generate actionable insights in an efficient, secure, and timely manner and digestible and meaningful formats.

c. Scope

The consultant will be accompanied with the team of UNCDF/ UNDP staff in conducting these assessments. The scope of the assignment is limited to finding answers to the four big questions of who, what, why and how. Specifically, the team will aim to understand:

1. Who are DFS data stakeholders?

This will require categorizing stakeholders and their roles or contributions to the data flow. Stakeholders are expected to come from within the central bank and external to the central bank. These my include:

- Departments/organizations responsible for collecting, analyzing, and publishing DFS data.
- Departments/teams responsible for managing data systems within an organization.
- Departments/organizations producing and sharing the data.
- Departments/organizations relying on the data for insights and decision making.
- Stakeholders with data sharing agreements for DFS data.

2. What data they collect?

The objective of this step is to understand the legal framework for collecting and reporting DFS data and the types of data financial service providers (FSPs) capture from users and what is shared with regulatory bodies. Also, at this stage the team will want to find out the types of data that are commonly shared between different departments within the central banks and those shared with other government ministries, department and agencies.

3. Why they collect this data

The different stakeholders identified in the previous section are likely to have different data needs given the types of insights they are seeking or functional challenges they are looking to address. This step aims to find out what insights each user would like to extract from the data, what data they currently have and what data they want or wish to have.

This and the previous steps will help the team establish the key policy objective of each stakeholder, the type of data they would like to collect, source of data (external or internal and specific organization or department) recipient/host of the data within the central bank, frequency with which the data is collected, the file format in which data are submitted and the channel through which the data are submitted. The step also aims to uncover other functional needs for data including, quality, correctness and completeness of data or the need for transactional level and disaggregated data.

The team should engage selected FSPs and ministries, departments and agencies (MDAs) that share data with the central bank to understand their ability to fulfil compliance reporting and sharing data, respectively. These engagements should also help to uncover challenges that FSPs and MDAs are experiencing with regards to data transmission processes and their wishes to addressing them.

Also, an engagement across departments or authorities is encouraged to understand any duplication in reporting requirements and its implications in increased compliance burden.

4. How are data collected, analyzed and used

This step focuses on understanding the available software and hardware to enable data transmission, validation, storage, analysis, and reporting/visualizing. The goal for this step is to identify bottlenecks in the existing data architecture and recommend potential system or process changes to streamline the workflow. Therefore, the team will seek to answer specific questions at each of the five data architecture segments:

Data transmission

- How is data collected from different data sources?
- What channels (emails, web portals, APIs, printed files, etc.) are commonly used to transmit data?

Data validation

- How is data validated?
- How adequate is the data validation process in ensuring the accuracy of data collected?
- What are the challenges for fast and reliable data validation?

Data storage and hosting

- How is the data stored?
- Where is the data hosted (in the cloud, on-premise server, or both)?
- Are the existing data hosting solutions limiting their capabilities?
- What is the financial authority stand on cloud-based solutions for data storage and hosting?

Data analytics

- What types of analytics does the organization conduct?
- What is limiting the capacity of financial authority analysts, supervisors, and regulators to conduct complex data mining and predictive analysis?

Data reporting and visualization

- What type of analytical reporting systems are in place?
- Are the reports presented in a manner that meets the use cases of different personas?
- What additional reports would different users need to be automated but currently are not?

In addition to hard and soft technological tools, the organization's ability to leverage data is dependent on the types of skills available. Therefore, this step will require assessing the human resources capacity to drive an organizational data strategy. The team will engage with representatives involved in data collection and analytics to understand the following:

- What skills are available to clean, reshape, analyze, and extract meaningful insights from data?
- Is there a specialized team that looks only at data analytics?
- Is there adequate human resource capacity to analyze the collected data, both in terms of the number of staff and staff expertise?
- What skills are missing?

d. Approach and Methodology

The diagnostic assessment will entail a combination of a desk research, semi structured interviews or focused group discussions/workshops. Interviews or workshops with stakeholders will be conducted in-person (depending on the pandemic travel guidelines) in each country. We estimate each in-country visit would take about 5 days whereby the team will interview or engage with supervision, regulators, and analysts from different departments within the central bank. The team will also engage with regulated institutions that are authorized to understand their data collection process and use of market data. These discussions will identify the capacity of regulated institutions to report high-quality data on a more frequent basis, considering the variety of skills and systems used by the providers.

As indicated on the scope section above, engagements with other government MDAs who share data with the central bank is crucial to understand the types of data that are commonly shared and mechanism in place for sharing such data.

e. Deliverables and Schedules/Expected Outputs

At the end of the diagnostic, the team will present the preliminary findings that will be further elaborated in the draft report that will be submitted in two weeks after the diagnostic assessment. The outputs of the diagnostic assessment will be a report highlighting:

- 1. Definition of supervisory and regulatory priorities and use cases that different solutions may help address.
- 2. Mapping of existing data collection and analysis processes used by the central bank.
- 3. Assessment of private sector capacity to collect and report data.
- 4. Specification of initial skills and capacities required by the central bank to interact with and maintain the existing or potential data system.
- 5. Assessment (including feasibility) of possible solutions to inform prioritization. This will also include components of the data architecture to be integrated with the proposed solution.

After the central bank approves the diagnostic report, the consultant will draft terms of references for soliciting vendors to develop a prototype of a prioritized used case.

f. Key Performance Indicators and Service Level

The consultant will work closely with the UNCDF/UNDP team. The UNCDF/UNDP team members would bring in DFS expertise, expertise in policy and regulations or country context and relationships with specific regulatory bodies.

- The contractor will be responsible for leading the assessment of software and hardware tools available at the central bank and identify opportunities for improvement with emerging technologies that are appropriate for the context.
- The UNCDF/UNDP team will be responsible for coordinating with central banks and setting meetings with respective departments or central banks, FSPs or MDAs representatives.
- The contractor is expected to spend no more than 15 days per country on the diagnostic assessment, including in-country travel and report writing.

g. Governance and Accountability

- The contractor will work under the program manager of the UNCDF Office in Brussels.
- The contractor is expected to participate on project meetings and lead the assessment of software and hardware tools as well as human resources data analytics skills available at the central bank and the overall readiness organization's readiness to adopt suptech/regtech solutions.
- The partner central bank will approve the diagnostic assessment report and the roadmap for the next steps. In the event that the central banks has approved the development of a prototype solution, the contractor will help draft terms of reference for the proposed solution. Depending on the contractor's capacity, UNCDF/UNDP team may request the contractor to support with the recruitment of a vendor who can develop a prototype for the proposed solution.

h. Facilities to be provided by UNDP

None – the contractor is required to provide their own resources for the assignment.

i. Expected duration of the contract/assignment
