Technical Specifications

The UVS-AB-T measures both UVA irradiance and UVB irradiance.

This dual-band radiometer has two separate detection systems with a 0 to 3 V analogue voltage output for each band. The precision quartz dome and diffuser provide class-leading directional response.

The instrument is thermo stated (controlled at $+25\text{ }^{\circ}\text{C} \pm 2\text{ }^{\circ}\text{C}$) including the filters, detectors and pre-amplifiers.

Due to the heating/cooling control and signal amplifiers, UVS requires external power.

Precision quartz dome and diffuser for class-leading directional response.

UVS-AB-T has a rugged weather-resistant case made from protected aluminum, is designed for continuous outdoor operation, and can be easily be adjusted to the horizontal plane by three levelling feet and a built-in bubble level.

The screw-in drying cartridge is easy to remove and replacement desiccant is supplied in convenient refill packets.

UVIATOR software

UVS-E-T is supplied with extensive factory calibration data files and our unique UVIATOR software package. These files allow manual correction of the data to minimize errors. However, UVIATOR takes this a step further by carrying out the process automatically and providing graphical visualization of the results.

Combining UVIATOR software with the spectral characteristics of the radiometer in the calibration files, corrects the mismatch between the actual instrument response and the ideal sensor response. This enables further corrections to be made to compensate for changing atmospheric conditions that influence the UV spectrum.

The correction methodology is based on an atmosphere transmission model. UVIATOR calculates the air mass for each stored measurement and retrieves from the internet the appropriate Ozone Monitoring Instrument (OMI) satellite. This satellite gives the total Ozone column density based on position (longitude and latitude) and time.

Using UVIATOR typically reduces the measurement uncertainty by a factor of two.
