At any time during the validity of the quotation, no price variation due to escalation, inflation, fluctuation in exchange rates, or any other market factors shall be accepted by UNDP after it has received the quotation. INCORPORATING CLIMATE CHANGE INTO THE MANAGEMENT OF PRIORITY HEALTH RISK IN GHANA

1. INTRODUCTION

Climate Change has close, direct and unprecedented threat to health care delivery to hundreds and millions of people in developing countries, and particularly in Ghana. The Ministry of Health of the Government of Ghana with technical support from UNDP, Ghana is implementing a Global Environment Facility funded project aimed to integrate climate change in health policy design. The project is intended to strategically develop systems, processes and thinking to strengthen the health sector response to climate change risks and shift the current response towards being more anticipatory, deliberate and systematic. The project has 3 strategic outcomes:

- 1) Strengthening technical capacities to manage climate change-related health risks.
- 2) Mainstreaming climate change health risks into decision-making at local and national health policy levels.
- 3) Strengthening the climate change-health risk knowledge base through effective management and dissemination of information

As part of activities to strengthen institutions in the Ghana Health Service to create a robust disease surveillance and response systems in the three pilot districts,

The Project supplied 72 mobile handsets to community health facilities in the 3 Pilot districts to facilitate tele consultation in these districts. This has yielded positive results in the areas of disease incidence and its management. As a second type in enhancing these efforts, the project aims to establish an effective Tele consultation Centre in all the three districts. To ensure that this system is effective and sustainable, a number of consultations, meetings and field visits were done by the MOH, CCH project team and Telemedicine experts. A model Teleconsultation centre has been established in the Ashanti region under the millennium village project. It is in this regard, that, the project wishes to establish similar centers in the pilot regions.
