Technical Specifications

1. BACKGROUND

Minnieh is among the coastal villages, with altitudes varying from zero to 400m and a strategic location linking Tripoli to Akkar and Dannieh through one main highway that passes across the villages. This certainly generates extra stress on the municipal infrastructure and services, especially due to the limited financial support the municipalities get from the Lebanese government. Location is surely an asset, but it also burdens at times the poorly-equipped municipalities.

Due to the Syrian crisis, Minnieh and the neighbouring villages hosted a big number of Syrian families (18,332 Syrian displaced today only in Minnieh added to the 21,320 registered residents), which requires additional resources from the local government to ensure the provision of public services to all its residents.

For instance, the number of garbage bins is no longer sufficient to serve the rising need. The municipality is currently collecting garbage with what it has in hand in terms of machineries and work force. Noting that the influx of Syrian displaced to Minnieh increased the daily quantity of households' solid waste production from 25 to 35 tons per day.

Deir Amar is a coastal village, with altitudes varying from zero to 400m above sea level. Deir Amar links Tripoli to Akkar through the main highway that passes across the village. This certainly generates extra stress on the municipal infrastructure and services, especially due to the limited support the municipalities get from the Lebanese government.

Due to the Syrian crisis, Deir Amar and the neighboring villages hosted a big number of Syrian families (3,827 displaced Syrians today only in Deir Amar added to the 4,890 locals). This rapid growth in the population requires additional resources from the local government to ensure the provision of adequate public services to all its residents. For instance, the number of garbage bins is no longer sufficient compared to the increased daily volume of the domestic solid waste. After the influx of the Syrian refugees the quantity of garbage increased from 16 to 22 tons per day.

The municipality is currently collecting the solid waste with the limited available resources in terms of human resources, machineries and financial capabilities.
