Terms of Reference for Communications Campaign

1. Background

On April 25, 2015 a 7.8 magnitude earthquake struck Nepal, creating large scale damage and many casualties. Since the earthquake, there has been tremendous response efforts from the Government of Nepal and the humanitarian community, particularly in the 14 most affected districts. While there has been important progress, urgent attention is required to address the issues, needs and concerns of affected communities.

Engagement with, and accountability to, affected people is critical. Affected people need to be kept informed about available services and aid, and ensure that gender equality and the diversity of affected communities is addressed when engaging the community. Without access to reliable timely, accurate information, survivors are unable to make the choices necessary to develop their own survival strategies.

Engagement with affected communities is essential to ensure that they can be more effective in organizing their own response, taking life-saving actions at household level, accessing humanitarian assistance and providing feedback on challenges and gaps.

The Common Feedback Project (CFP) has been established as an inter-agency common service built on partnerships established prior to the earthquake. Together with local partners, national authorities as well as private sector, the CFP works to address information and communication needs across different language groups and regions adapting its strategies to existing and diverse digital, age, gender and disability divides within affected communities.

In particular, the CFP collects feedback from communities to identify needs, concerns, rumors and issues. Through this feedback, the humanitarian community is in a better position to adapt response efforts to address community needs. A key component of this feedback is to ensure the information and feedback collected from communities is communicated back to those communities.

In order to ensure the information loop is closed on feedback from affected communities, the CFP will develop a communications strategy, which will form the basis of a communications campaign to reach out to affected communities with important information through a variety of mediums, and in a variety of local languages. The information and messages to be disseminated to affected communities will be based on the feedback collected and rumors tracked. As such, the CFP is looking to engage a professional media agency to develop and disseminate this campaign on an ongoing basis, for the duration of the project.
