1. Background

Unrest in the Syrian Arab Republic has been on-going since March 2011 and has deteriorated ever since. The situation has recently worsened as the number of people in need of humanitarian assistance has increased many folds since March 2011 and is now estimated at over 9.3 million people (SRP, 2015). Sixty-five per cent of the population or 13.9 million persons are living now in poverty, with 7.9 million people becoming poor since the beginning of the crisis, of which 4.4 million living in extreme poverty as households spent their savings and exhausted their coping strategies (SCPR, 2014). Among the affected people, the number of IDPs has grown significantly and is now estimated at 6.5 million. Many families had to leave their homes and seek refuge in schools, public gardens, and relatives' houses or in surrounding countries because of violence but also scarcity of livelihoods, access to basic services and community infrastructure in their home towns and villages.

Electricity production and distribution was heavily affected by on-going hostilities (destruction, looting, sabotage, etc.). The reliable and sustainable electricity supply is essential to respond to the immediate humanitarian needs of crisis affected communities, namely for the operation of essential humanitarian services such as water supply, hospitals, schools, sewerage treatment plants and other community services. A number of power plants are suffering serious shortages of spare parts for adequate operations and maintenance to replace those who have already attained their design life or have been damaged during operations. Thus, the need for targeted infrastructure rehabilitation programmes.

As part of its mandate on Early Recovery and Livelihoods, UNDP will support the urgent rehabilitation of electricity infrastructure with the aim of reducing instability and insufficiency of electricity supply which causes significant impacts on the health sector, water and sanitation, and livelihoods opportunities in general in affected communities. The project entitled "Reliable and safe electricity to respond to the immediate humanitarian needs in crisis-affected Syrian Communities – Phase 2" will support the urgent maintenance and replacement of required spare parts in Baniyas and Al Zara power plants to avoid sudden shutdown in order to respond to the immediate humanitarian needs in crisis-affected Syrian Communities.

UNDP Office in Syria will contract the original equipment manufacturer (OEM) for the provision of manufacturing and supply of spare parts for rehabilitation of Zara and Baniyas Power Plants

UNDP Office in Syria is seeking offers from reputable, well established and experienced consulting companies to assess UNDP Syria in Value for Money assessment by carry out a prices analysis of the offer submitted by OEM ensure that the prices are in line with global market rate.

2. OBJECTIVES

The Company is expected to provide independent review on the level of the prices submitted by OEM and ensure that these prices are typical of what Japanese contractor would offer into similar projects in the overseas Japan home market or overseas in for example the Middle East

3. SCOPE OF WORK

The company, in close collaboration with UNDP technical team and power plants representatives, will be expected to (but not limited to):

- Review the price of prioritized spare parts (mechanical, electrical and control system) for targeted power plants.
- Assess typical pricing of the required spare parts to global market prices and more importantly in the Japanese market.
- Review the pricing structure of main contractors/competitors to OEM and compare if manufacturing and design costs as offered by OEM are typically of these levied by other Japanese contractors
- Keep in regular communication with UNDP to allow ongoing joint evaluation and clarification assessment to take place.
- Prepare independent estimation of the cost of all items
