In mid-2020, UNDP South Africa was resourced in support of an inclusive and multi-sectoral response to COVID-19 and addressing its socio-economic impact in South Africa. One of the main objectives of this programme is “integrated and inclusive crisis management and response,” with particular emphasis on safeguarding human rights, protecting vulnerable groups, and engaging communities for prevention response and social cohesion in the context of COVID-19. To carry out critical COVID-19 response work in local communities, UNDP South Africa intends to collaborate with civil society organisations and enlist the contractor to implement a community response plan.

The assignment will include providing advocacy support for vulnerable populations — including the chronically ill, victims of gender-based violence (GBV), those with disabilities, and the elderly — as well as awareness raising and anti-discrimination campaign. As determined by the needs in specific localities or districts, the contractor will also be tasked with the recruitment and coordination of peer educators, healthcare workers, and human rights advocates.

- Support for vulnerable groups by identifying avenues for improved legal assistance, medical care, inclusive decision-making, and livelihood security.
- Ensuring social cohesion during the COVID-19 crisis through awareness-raising and anti-discrimination campaigns which mainstream the needs and rights of vulnerable populations and promote peaceful and cohesive existence.
- Identification and promotion of innovative solutions to address COVID-19 impact at community level via training of peer educators at the community level, strengthening civilian-local government partnership, and outreach campaigns.
- Providing support for vulnerable groups (including the chronically ill, victims of gender-based violence, those with disabilities, and the elderly) by identifying avenues for improved legal assistance, GBV response, medical care, community leadership opportunities, and livelihood security.
- Identifying and adapting community infrastructure and forums for COVID-19 response work.
