I. BACKGROUND

COVID 19 is having a growing dramatic impact on the health of the people of Indonesia, a country with the fourth largest population in the world. For millions of them, the epidemic also threatens employment, livelihoods and access to public services at a time when they most need them. The human development impact of COVID 19 is strong and will be long lasting. It will be even stronger for the poor and the vulnerable, including the estimated 40 per cent of the population amounting to about 180 million people living just above the national poverty line and vulnerable to external shocks. Women, especially female headed households and women working in the large informal economy, daily workers and people with disabilities who are also facing multifold challenges in Indonesia, will be the worst affected. The economic and social impact of COVID 19 will therefore be heavy, multi-sectoral and while having immediate effects, it will also span over a medium to long period of time.

UNDP supports Indonesia and its people with immediate and longer-term response to the COVID-19 Pandemics, which is human development centered and multi-sectoral, as implied by UNDP's broad development mandate. As a member of the UN development system, UNDP has an important role to play in the response to the COVID 19 crisis in Indonesia. UNDP's immediate response to COVID-19 is organized in 4 main streams:

1. Immediate strengthening of health systems and health governance and building of their longer-term resilience.
2. Direct support to an inclusive and "whole of society" response for prevention and mitigation at central and local levels.
3. Addressing the socio-economic impacts of COVID-19 to protect the Indonesian people and safeguard progress towards the Sustainable Development Goals.
4. Utilizing digital solutions and big data analysis for enhanced national response.

To support the project implementation specifically at sub-national level, the project intends to employ the Provincial Adviser to provide technical advice and maintain strategic relationships with relevant key partners at provincial level.

II. SCOPE OF WORK, RESPONSIBILITIES AND DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPOSED ANALYTICAL WORK

The Provincial Advisor will deliver the output through an extensive consultation with various stakeholders that consists of representative of practitioners, experts, local governments and NGO's. The consultant is expected to accomplish the following:

- Analyse and review the implementation of RESTORE project and provide advice to the Provincial programme support; its potential integration with COVID-19 related policies and programs at province level.
- Identify and advise on measures to the provincial project team and her/his team to make operational the prescribed Development Objective, Outputs and Activities of the RESTORE project.
- Provide support to the provincial project team in preparing periodical progress reports of the RESTORE project implementation.
- A client-oriented and efficient approach that has a positive impact on the image of UNDP Indonesia.
- Provide technical advice to relevant partners as necessary to ensure enhancement of quality and delivery of the RESTORE project.
- Identify and support cross-fertilization initiatives between the RESTORE project and other UNDP supported activities at province level.
- Provide technical advice and supports to strengthen coordination and partnership between RESTORE project and other UNDP supported activities with sub-national government at province level.
- Provide technical expertise to design and formulate long-term strategy and conceptual framework to recover social-economic impacts of COVID-19 in province.
- Perform other relevant duties as required by the supervisor.
