IC - Social Innovation Platform Coordinator, Urban Resilience and Development in informal settlements in Karachi

A. Project Title: Mainstreaming, Acceleration and Policy Support for SDGs

B. Project Description

Migration is a 'global mega trend' of recent times having a significant impact on socio-economic development. Pakistan, due to its geographical position has been one of the five largest recipient of refugee populations worldwide. Internal migration – rural to urban – within Pakistan is also on the rise. Currently, Pakistan has 75.6 million people living in urban areas.¹ With the growing population and rural-urban migration, by 2030 almost 41 percent of Pakistan's population will be living in urban areas and by 2050 it will be more than half of the country's population.² The urban population growth has not been matched by planned urbanization resulting in creation of informal urban settlements and a shortage for urban services. COVID-19 has further highlighted the need to address the informal expansion of urban areas, as the informal settlements have people living in small, over-crowded spaces with little access to clean water, inadequate sanitation, and limited healthcare services.

UNDP Pakistan is implementing a pilot initiative on Integrated Urban Resilience for Migration and Displaced Population, developed by Bangkok Regional Hub. The objective of the intervention is to strengthen urban resilience and development with a focus on migrants, displaced people, and host communities in informal urban settlements contributing to sustainable development in Pakistan. The initiative focuses on data and analytics, innovation and learning, and Policy and Programming. A key focus of the initiative is to engage local communities through creative advocacy and outreach tools to generate broader public attention to urban challenges in informal settlements and engage youth to identify entrepreneurial solutions to pressing social problems in informal urban settlements. It also aims to promote social cohesion by engaging municipal decision-makers and the broader urban public using a series of personal stories of marginalized individuals in informal urban settlements.

UNDP Pakistan is using a social innovation platform (SIP) approach for innovation and learning component of the initiative. The SIP approach focuses at listening to the local communities and stakeholders to understand the social dynamics and needs of communities and then develop a portfolio of interventions to address their social and economic needs. This is with the understanding that the traditional development linear projects tend to be disconnected and do not yield transformative change in society.
