I. BACKGROUND & PROJECT DESCRIPTION

The impacts of climate change are not gender-neutral. In Viet Nam, as in other countries, climate change often exacerbates existing inequalities between women and men, the poor and other vulnerable groups. It is clear that people who are poor, especially women, women-headed households and ethnic minorities are most at risk from climate change because they have less ability to adapt to and deal with severe weather events such as storms, floods, and drought.

The landmark Paris Agreement (COP21, 2015) ^{al} makes three specific references to gender and in particular outlines in its Preamble the approach that Parties should take in order to respect the rights of vulnerable group in all climate action policies. Acknowledging that climate change is a common concern of humankind, Parties should, when taking action to address climate change, respect, promote and consider their respective obligations on[...] the right to development, as well as gender equality, empowerment of women and intergenerational equity.

The theme of International Women’s Day 2022 is: “Equality today for a sustainable tomorrow” recognizing the contribution of women and girls around the world who are leading the charge on climate change adaptation, mitigation, and response, to build a more sustainable future for all. The theme for International Women’s Day is also aligned with the priority theme for the upcoming 66th Commission on the Status of Women (CSW66): “Achieving gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls in the context of climate change, environmental and disaster risk reduction policies and programmes.”

UNDP Viet Nam works to enhance the role of women as agents of change who actively engaged in dealing with the impacts of climate change and in finding solutions. Women from all different backgrounds are engaged in many areas of climate change such as in sustainable energy, circular economy, low-carbon development, climate change adaptation, and youth empowerment. There is a wealth of knowledge and lessons to be learned from the diversity of women champions for climate and environment in Viet Nam.
