1. BACKGROUND

Addressing disability issues through policy and programmatic interventions has emerged as a crucial development agenda for sustainable development. By overlooking the rights and potentials of persons with disabilities, it is difficult to achieve sustainable economic development by 2030. Accordingly, the United Nations Country Team (UNCT) has been supporting the Government of Sierra Leone through activities that seek to enhance the legal and regulatory framework for the implementation of crucial components of the CRPD, a global accord to which the country has committed. Despite these interventions, a country-specific Situational Analysis completed in 2021 revealed key challenges to preconditions for disability inclusion in Sierra Leone.

Key among these are areas that need to be strengthened in the existing Persons with Disability Act, 2011. The Act may have been effective in enhancement of structures that provide services to persons with disabilities but the realization of rights in practice remains critical challenge. The Acts put a lot of emphasis on rights and privileges of persons with disabilities and entrusts the National Commission for Persons with Disabilities (NCPD) with mandate to serve adjustment orders and issue penalties on proprietors of inaccessible premises. However, accessibility in practice remains one of the biggest challenges that persons with physical disability face. Most of the provisions in the existing Act remain unrealistic and untenable given the existing capacity of the Commission. To enforce compliance, the NCPD supports information and advocacy, but ultimately depends on organizations and institutions on whether they do implement recommendations. It is against this backdrop that the UNDP hired a national consultant who supported the Ministry of Social Welfare to review the PWDA in 2021. Following extensive and inclusive regional consultations with stakeholders a draft PWDA Bill (2021) had been produced, validated, and submitted to the MoSW.

Meanwhile, following the submission of a joint proposal by the UNCT, Sierra Leone was competitively awarded a grant from the UN Partnership on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (UNPRPD) to advance systems for disability inclusion, to positively impact the lives of persons with disabilities. This new program provided us with an opportunity to have another lawyer of review of the draft by technical experts before it is presented to cabinet and later laid in parliament to go through the normal legislative processes. UNCT solicited and received a range of technical comments during March 2022, primarily from UN agency and development partner experts.

Given the above, the UNDP seeks the services of an experienced legal consultant to review the technical comments received and hold further consultation sessions on select technical topics with key constituent groups (as useful) for production of a new draft of the revised PWDA. The findings of the afore mentioned Situational Analysis should also be taken into consideration in refining the draft.

Possible topics for additional consultations (to be agreed with UNDP focal point) are definition of disability, roles and responsibilities of the NCPD, tax exemption elements, and mandate and function of the Development Fund.

Some of the key areas that should either be factored or strengthened in the proposed Bill include:

Expansion of affirmative action measures

The recognition that although all persons with disabilities deserves affirmatives action measures, there are still specific groups that suffer double marginalization. Various groups have been identified for affirmative action measures including girls and women, children, youth, minorities and elderly persons with disabilities.

Rights of persons with disabilities and citizenship

Many persons with disabilities continue to suffer overt and covert discrimination on the basis of their disability. Many parents with children with disabilities, for example have not even registered their child, once they realized that he /she has a disability. Additionally, there are many adults with disability who have not been registered to obtain identity cards. The proposed change requires that children and persons with disabilities are encouraged to apply for relevant documentation to support their nationality, including the rights to name (at birth), and a legal identification document for immigration and liberty of movement purposes.

The rights to legal capacity

The Bill should introduce the enjoyment of legal capacity as a right. There has been a long debate on the issues of legal capacity for PWDs in the country. It should propose equality before the law, and equal protection and benefit of the law. Some of the enjoyment expected from this is the right to inherent, control of a persons' financial affairs, and having equal access to financial services including loans and credit facilities. Its also cushions against arbitrary deprivation of ownership of property by persons with disabilities.

Participation in public and political life

The proposed law should contain a whole section that promotes participation in public, civil and political life. It should promote the nurturing of an environment that allows person s with disability to participate in public life. May barriers impede the participation of persons with disabilities, ranging from the physical environment, access to education as well as cultural attitudes. The proposal should give meaning to the provisions in our constitution which requires non-discrimination on the basis of disability. Among other things, the bill ought to reinforce accessibility of polling stations, inclusion in political parties as well as inclusion in the electoral system and other public bodies and associations.

Expansion of economic and social rights

The proposed Bill must have numerous provisions relating to economic and social rights. They should reinforce the rights to education, to health, formal education employment, accessibility, mobility. Information as well as sports and recreation. Access to education, health and employment, remains a key challenge for many persons with disabilities in the country.

Access to justice

The proposed Bill ought to realise that persons with disabilities need access to fair justice system and that changes are required to the criminal justice system. In this respect, the Bill must propose provisions of disability appropriate accommodations within the criminal justice system. This is to enhance the role of persons with disabilities as indirect participants in the legal system.

Institutional changes

This Bill should provide a legal framework for the decentralization of the commission for Persons with Disabilities. There should be a conscious attempt from duty bearers to decentralize the Commission. The Commission is expected to conduct research and provide relevant data and information on the rehabilitation and training offered to persons with disabilities, along side registration of persons with disabilities as to acquire assistive devices.

Additionally, the consultant should ensure that the language of the bill is gender inclusive and in keeping with best global practices on technical definitions and inclusive language, as guided by the technical expert comments received.
