1. BACKGROUND

The Botswana Ministry of Justice (MOJ) exists to provide policy development, legislation, programmes and strategic directions on matters relating to justice.

The mandate of the Ministry is broad as it entails the following services:

- Provision of judicial and legal services
- Civil and criminal justice
- Protection and promotion of human rights
- Promotion of alternative dispute resolution

Given its mandate, MOJ is seeking support from the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) to conduct a baseline study and review of the criminal justice sector in Botswana, which will include key recommendations for reform to ensure a fair, efficient and effective criminal justice sector and access to justice for all. The review will include criminal justice sector institutions in Botswana at national, district and local levels.

The criminal justice sector has implemented several reforms since Botswana attained independence in 1966. These reforms include establishing specialised courts, case management systems, mobile courts, new statutory offices including the Directorate of Public Prosecutions and establishing a parastatal (Legal Aid Botswana) to provide legal aid for the indigent, among others. The underlying objective of these reforms has been to remove the bottlenecks and impediments to fair, accessible, affordable and timely justice and to ensure that the justice sector supports democratic governance and the rule of law as well as facilitating economic growth.

Some of the key challenges already identified within the sector, that inhibit efficient and effective delivery of justice include: a lack of coordination between institutions, a backlog of cases and the costs incurred in accessing justice. There is an absence of an effective case management system in some institutions. There is a lack of an electronic database to track and monitor case flow management. There is an absence of an effective calendar system to avoid conflicting dates by counsel, which cause adjournment of proceedings. There are inadequate protection measures for vulnerable witnesses and victims. There is also no public defender system in Botswana. It is against this background, that the Ministry seeks to identify and implement measures that will holistically address these and other relevant issues.

2. OBJECTIVES OF THE REVIEW

Through this review the MOJ is seeking to improve capacities across the criminal justice sector to plan for delivery; identify and solve implementation challenges and account for delivery of high quality and timely, fair, and accessible criminal justice services. The capacities of individuals and each Ministry Department and criminal justice sector entity contributing to the coordination and/or implementation of institutional mandates is therefore critical.
The review will assess the criminal justice system as a whole, and as interrelated and interdependent entities, to provide an evidence basis for holistic and comprehensive criminal justice system reform at all levels. The review will encompass the current legal and policy frameworks, institutional policy and regulatory functions, institutional arrangements including monitoring and evaluation and implementation practices which are directly related to criminal justice sector reform in Botswana.

The review will also examine how the criminal justice system engages with poor, vulnerable and disadvantaged people and groups. The review will also examine service delivery standards and the protection of vulnerable witnesses and victims.

The review will recommend specific areas for reform elaborating upon possible short, medium and long-term reform initiatives with the aim of supporting the Government of Botswana to ensure coherence in the criminal justice sector and promoting evidence-based justice system reform policies and programs. The baseline, findings and recommendations, when approved, will form the basis of the “Criminal Justice Sector Reform Roadmap.”
