I. BACKGROUND

Armed robbery, drug trafficking, human trafficking, people smuggling, and other illegal acts committed at sea plague the Indonesian waters with dire economic consequences. The Indonesian waters maritime routes are exploited by perpetrators of maritime crimes who defiantly operate on porous borders, in light of jurisdictional limitations, weak law enforcement and lack of regional cooperation. The fight against maritime crimes therefore triggers innumerable challenges in the region owing to limited and/or absence of technical/ enforcement ability and resources.

Consequently, criminal acts such as smuggling of drugs, weapons, and other illegal cargo, exploitation of people through trafficking, slavery, and kidnapping, depletion of the sea's resources and armed robbery at sea, wildlife trafficking, smuggling of immigrants, IUU fishing etc. are carried out with impunity as these remain undetected, investigations do not lead to prosecutions and often, prosecutions do not culminate into convictions.

Furthermore, the Strait of Malacca which located in the western part of Indonesia closed to Sumatera Island contain maritime trade routes are fundamental to the economic development and prosperity. The lack of prosecution related to maritime criminality continues to undermine efforts to combat such crime. The reason why Indonesia are still not at prosecution stage is due to various factors such as limited national maritime capacities, absence of robust legal frameworks, insufficient domestic justice systems, and other factors inhibiting the legal finish of prosecution related to criminal activities at sea.

UNODC GMCP has been promoting legal reform and training maritime criminal justice practitioners on the Law of the Sea and transnational organised maritime crime matters in the region. The support has comprised of legal assessments conducted regarding maritime offences, establishing legal frameworks, and support in developing solid legislation in line with the UN Convention on Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) and other international maritime instruments.
