I. Background

In Montenegro, complex economic, social and political environment shadows and deprioritizes issues concerning women's rights. Gender stereotypes persist and overall social atmosphere is not supportive to gender equality. Throughout the years, GBV remains the most extreme manifestation of gender inequalities, and when these inequalities increase, violence follows the same pattern.

The European Commission's Montenegro 2018 Report stresses that violence against women and girls remains a serious concern in the country, elaborating that despite the improved alignment of legislation with the Istanbul Convention, the implementation of the Convention is proceeding slowly, with little improvement in the capacity and gender sensitivity of existing institutions.

The GREVIO baseline evaluation report recognizes the significant process made to build a comprehensive framework on violence against women, but also notes that legislation is primarily focused on domestic violence and neglects to address other forms of violence with the same level of thoroughness. Furthermore, GREVIO raises concerns regarding the minimization of violence by professionals involved in the prevention of and response to violence against women, including judges, police officers, and social workers.

GREVIO recognizes the important role that NGOs play in monitoring implementation and made it clear in its Rules of Procedure (Rule 35) that NGOs and other members of civil society are vital sources of information and that all information received from NGOs will be treated as confidential by GREVIO.

Overall, the capacity of women's organizations in Montenegro to hold the government accountable to their gender equality commitments and monitor government activities and spending from a gender equality perspective needs to be improved through technical support, sustainable funding, and creating networking opportunities. In addition, they are also key stakeholders in the provision of services that are essential in the establishment of multi-sectoral and coordinated mechanisms to adequately respond to the needs of victims of violence.

The COVID 19 pandemic demonstrated all the shortcomings of the institutional response and inadequacies of the support system particularly in the area of the fight against gender-based violence. Since its outbreak, the COVID-19 pandemic has only intensified GBV, particularly in, but not limited to, the domestic sphere, and it is for this reason that more often, it is referred to the issue of violence against women as the "shadow pandemic."

The crisis further showcased and deepen the existing barriers for women and girls' access to essential life-saving support services such as counselling and justice resources, and legal advice as well as sexual health, and other crucial medical assistance.

II. Objective of EU and UNDP support

The support to strengthening of civil society organizations to advocate for the development and implementation of laws and policies and provide services in line with CEDAW and the Istanbul Convention will contribute to the creation of an enabling legislative and policy environment in line with international standards on eliminating violence against women and all forms of discrimination. Recent research conducted under the EU/ UN Women Programme “Implementing Norms Changing Minds” confirms that significant gaps remain between the existence of relevant legislation and its full and proper implementation. Existing legislation and policies are often gender-neutral and fail to recognize the structural causes of VAWG, thus neglecting to effectively identify and address the root causes of violence.

The Call for Proposals falls under the Programme “Ending violence against women and girls: Implementing norms, changing minds” (February 2020 – July 2023). The Programme aims at ending gender-based discrimination and violence against women and girls, with a particular focus on the most disadvantaged groups of women, in six Western Balkans countries (Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo, FYR Macedonia, Montenegro, and Serbia) and Turkey. The Programme is anchored in the normative frameworks of CEDAW and the Istanbul Convention, and also in alignment with EU accession standards. The Programme is run by UN WOMEN (with UNDP being implementing partner in Montenegro) and is funded by the European Commission within the Instrument for Pre- Accession Assistance (IPA) II.

III. Scope of the project

The Programme builds on the strong links of UNDP with women civil society organizations (CSOs) in Montenegro, placing the Programme in a strategic position to assist women in their drive for rights as citizens. Civil society, in particular women's organizations, plays a crucial role in the promotion of gender equality and women's rights. Furthermore, women's organizations are key stakeholders in ensuring that the perspectives and voices of the most excluded and discriminated against groups of women are heard by policy-makers. Additionally, women's organizations are instrumental - in terms of their networks, outreach and innovation - to facilitating the required behavioral and attitudinal changes for tackling the structural barriers to gender equality and ending violence against women.

The ultimate goal of the 42-months Programme is to reduce violence against women and girls and all forms of discrimination in the Western Balkans and Turkey. The Programme is anchored in the normative frameworks of CEDAW and the Istanbul Convention (IC), and also in alignment with EU accession standards.

The specific objectives are: (1) To create an enabling legislative and policy environment in line with international standards on eliminating violence against women and all forms of discrimination; (2) To promote favorable social norms and attitudes to promote gender equality and prevent discrimination of and violence against women; and (3) To empower women and girls (including those from disadvantaged groups) who have experienced discrimination or violence to advocate for and use available, accessible and quality services.
